Unit 1a- Reading
Second Grade Reading Growth Spurt (Grade 2 - Unit 1)
Summary and Rationale
This unit progresses through three parts. The first bend launches the year and gets readers working toward the big work of reading with fluency, stamina, and comprehension. If you feel your students need a few additional launching lessons in this bend, you may want to select a few extra lessons from the launching reading workshop resources in the resource section below; however, you should not take longer than 5-10 school days for additional launching lessons, so only choose what you feel is the most important. During the first bend, it is imperative to start assessing your readers right away. Ideally, by the time you start the second bend, you will want to have assessed all of your readers and have established meaningful partnerships for the rest of the work in this unit. The second bend recruits students to work on tackling hard words. Here, you will teach your readers new strategies for word solving quickly and independently. As part of this, readers will apply what they are learning in word study about prefixes, suffixes, vowel teams, and vocabulary to their independent reading work. The final bend invites readers to use what they are learning in writing to help them think more deeply in reading. The goal in this bend is to support readers with reading like writers. The unit should end with a celebration to highlight their learning and reflect on the ways they have grown in the time since school began.

Objectives (SLO)
Launching Reading Workshop

Prior to beginning this unit, you should spend a week launching reading workshop with your students. This is a great time to spend some time building excitement for reading and setting expectations, routines, and procedures. To support you with planning, you may want to generate ideas from the link below.

- Ideas for Launching Reading Workshop

Interactive Read Aloud: Those Darn Squirrels
Session 1	BEFORE YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Model how you take a sneak peek to preview. Then, invite children to think and react as they listen. • Give children a minute to discuss what is happening on the cover, and then draw them back together to think about how the title wants to be read. Rehearse reading the title a few ways. • Continue your sneak peek as you turn to the back cover and read the blurb. Retell what you learned in the blurb about the book while inviting children to join you and check your work. • Invite the children to retell what they just learned from the blurb and the front cover and then to predict what will happen in the rest of the story. AS YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Read aloud the text with expression, reacting to the text as you read. Encourage children to join you as you act out bits of the text to further engage students. • Pages 4-6: Read the next few pages, emphasizing details that bring out the point that the character is old and grumpy. React as you read and invite children to react with you. Then guide children as they check their sneak peek. • Pages 7-10: Invite children to listen for more information about the character and to look out for

	information about new characters, and then continue reading. Pause briefly to chart what students are learning about characters. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pages 11-12: Read to the end of the page and pause. Give children opportunities to act out this bit of text, elaborating on their ideas about the conflict. • Pages 13-19: Read on, stopping periodically to give children opportunities to act out bits of text and retell. With each retell, coach students to help each other in making the retell accurate but concise. • Pages 19-23: Stop reading to give children a chance to clarify meaning with a partner. Then prompt children to talk about how the story will be resolved • Pages 24-27: Continue reading, and then invite children to have a brief conversation with their partners about characters. • Read to the end of the book, and give the children one last opportunity to act out the text, taking on the character's thoughts. AFTER YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Move the children into a circle to facilitate whole-class conversation. Invite students to collaboratively retell the book as you turn the pages. • Discuss how parts of the book want to be read. • Reread a suggested portion of the text, talk about how it wants to be read, and then read it together. Follow this work by having children act out the part.
Session 2	BEFORE YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Before reading the book again, give children a chance to share all the reasons they like to reread books. • Invite children to retell once more to offer additional support with retelling and to remind students of the overall story. • Let children know that as you read today, they need to be thinking deeply about how the text fits together and what the lesson (or lessons) might be that the author is trying to teach. AS YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Read the story with expression, incorporating any work you did last time on how the books want to be read. Emphasize parts of the book you initially read past. • Page 12: Pause reading here to give children a chance to think about how the story fits together so far. • Pages 16-17: Invite partnerships to consider the lesson (or lessons) that the author is teaching. • Read to the end of the story, stopping a few more times for children to think about how the story fits together and what lessons they are finding in the text.

AFTER YOU READ

- Invite the children to begin a whole-class conversation about the read-aloud book.
- Start a chart to list the lessons children are discussing. Coach in to lift the level of conversation and help students strengthen the lessons they suggest.
- Focus the conversation. Support children to stay with one idea and discuss its merit across the text.
- Support students in revising the lesson they are discussing so it fits better with the book.

Shared Reading: Throughout the unit, outside of reader’s workshop, readers should have the opportunities to revisit texts as a class from different lenses. Teachers may want to choose texts just above the benchmark text level for this time of year.

In this unit, Mercy Watson to the Rescue and the song, “There Was an Old Lady Who Swallowed a Fly” are selected text. The same text will be shared across multiple days, each day with a different focus.

Below are suggested lenses, in this unit, for each day’s shared reading time:

DAY ONE:

- Build a community of readers who work together to read and think about beloved texts.
- Engage students in word solving as they draw on strategies they used last year while orchestrating the use of meaning, syntax, and visual information.

DAY TWO:

- Reading for comprehension.
- Pausing at tricky words to ask, “Does it make sense, sound right, and look right?”
- Rereading to understand the larger story.

DAY THREE:

- Reading for comprehension.
- Using foundational strategies to study tricky words.

DAY FOUR:

- Reading with fluency using appropriate pacing, parsing, and prosody.
- Drawing attention to different types of punctuation, both mid- and end-of-sentence punctuation.
- Reading for meaning.

DAY FIVE:

- Reading for deeper comprehension-thinking about how the chapter fits with the whole book.

Unit 1b- Writing
Lessons from the Masters: Improving Narrative Writing (Grade 2 - Unit 1)
Summary and Rationale
Over the course of Bend I, you will teach your students ways to stretch out and magnify their small moments, writing these with great attention to detail and to crafting powerful beginnings and endings. However, prior to teaching Bend I, you may want to establish some rules and routines for writer’s workshop with some additional launching lessons of your choosing. These lessons are included below and can be added into this unit as you see fit. Please do not take longer than two school weeks for these additional launching lessons, as this unit should be in full swing by mid

September. In Bend II, you will spotlight writing with purpose and learning from author’s craft. The final bend sets children up to make reading and writing connections, drawing on everything they have learned up until this point to discover craft moves in books they are reading on their own and to apply these to their own writing.

Launching Writing Workshop Prior to beginning this unit, you should spend a week launching writing workshop with your students. This is a great time to spend some time building excitement for writing and setting expectations, routines, and procedures. To support you with planning, you may want to generate ideas from the link below. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Ideas for Launching Writing Workshop IMPORTANT TIPS FOR IMMERSION: Before you begin the first bend, teachers should plan time for sharing mentor texts so that students can all explore common texts together. Interactive and shared writing are also important ways for students to see the process of writing small moment narratives.* The most challenging part of this unit is having second graders stretch out and magnify a small moment. Teach students ways to write small moment narratives paying great attention to detail and to crafting powerful beginnings and endings. *Note: In shared writing, the teacher acts as a scribe with student participation and collaboration. In interactive writing, the teacher and student share the pen and write the parts of the text together. *Have students write in a way that allows students to show off all they know about narrative writing. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Make a beginning for your story. Show what happened, in order. Use details to help readers picture your story. Make an ending for your story.

Unit 2a - Reading
Studying Characters and Their Stories (If, Then)
Summary and Rationale
This unit, your main role will be to support children as they work hard to infer about characters and dig deep into their stories. Essential to this unit is explicit instruction in skills and strategies for “reading” characters, to grow ideas about them. As students work inside early chapter books, you will also support them in accumulating the story, linking chapters, and dealing with any difficulty they encounter. This unit will be important to support the work in Unit 4a: Series Book Clubs. Together these units not only will help build stronger analytical skills, but will also help students stick to their books longer, eventually over a couple of sittings.
Recommended Pacing
November to December (6-8 weeks)

Enduring Understandings:	Essential Questions:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Readers will preview the text before reading it making predictions of what may happen, during reading they will ask and answer questions. Once they complete reading the book they will think about whether the character/s changed or not and why/why not. Readers will focus on using strategies such as unfamiliar vocabulary, surprising or confusing behavior, or conflicting points of view about the character to get to know the character. Readers study how characters change and grow by studying and investigating the ways the character's changed from the beginning to the end of the book. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> What are the things I can do before, during, and after reading a book to be a thoughtful reader of characters and stories? Objectives (SLO)

GETTING READY:

To get ready for this unit, you will want to be sure that you have plenty of fun and interesting books with engaging central characters for the various levels of readers in your classroom. Certainly, around levels H–L there are many well-known character series books, including Henry and Mudge by Cynthia Rylant, Pinky and Rex by James Howe, Elephant and Piggie by Mo Willems, and many, many others. You may decide to create a separate section in your classroom library containing characters grouped in baskets so that students will be able to select and choose books easily. While series books will be highly supportive for kids, you need not have an extensive collection for this unit. You can group books by broader character categories as well: friendships, families, characters who travel, sports, and characters at school are just a few examples. If you have multiple copies of any titles, certainly put them together in these baskets so that partners and groups of children can read the same books together, making it much easier to talk about and dramatize parts of the text. You will want your readers, when possible, to be able to choose books with their partners so that they can be reading similar character books. If you have multiple copies of some titles, this will be helpful, but kids need not read the same titles at the same time. Kids can swap books, make recommendations, and take turns retelling or reading to each other so that they can get to know each other's books, even if you do not have multiple copies available.

You will also want to select read-alouds and shared-reading texts that have clear problem-solution structures and whose characters change. You may decide to put together a little text set for read-aloud, such as Peter's Chair by Ezra Jack Keats, Julius, the Baby of the World by Kevin Henkes, and Noisy Nora by Rosemary Wells. These are perfect texts to explore character changes and lessons, and also have the added support of similar themes: siblings, growing older, being responsible.

Over time, you may find it helpful to create vocabulary charts as you read aloud. Listing character feelings that change across the book (upset, frustrated, lonely, relieved) is especially helpful. So is tracking character traits that are more constant across the book (smart, possessive, immature, sassy). As you create these charts, you might start with words that are more or less familiar, and then add on one or two unfamiliar words at a time, expanding the words your children have available for discussing characters. These charts can then be added onto across read-alouds, and used as a resource across the day for talking about feelings and character traits.

Students will know:

Students will be able to:

BEND I: STUDYING CHARACTERS, BEFORE, DURING, AND AFTER READING

Goal: Readers study characters before, during, and after reading.

- Readers use everything they already know to study the characters in their books, all the time . (IF...THEN...pages 7-8) (Activating schema)
- Readers have so many habits and strategies that will support them in doing strong reading work as they turn to fiction. (IF...THEN...page 8) (Activating schema)
- Readers start getting to know the characters before they even read the first page! (IF...THEN...pages 8-9) (Inferring)
- Readers not only think about what's going to happen in the book (like they used to do in little short books)—but they also are already thinking about how the characters probably feel about what's happening, based on the pictures. (IF...THEN...pages 8-9) Predicting and Inferring

- Readers determine character feelings based on pictures.
 - Read Aloud Suggestion: (Benji, the Bad Day, and Me) - it is suggested to utilize pages 1-10 to use picture clues to determine the main character's feelings.
 - Mini Lesson Suggestion: Have students model how people's facial expressions may look while feeling different emotions.
 - This lesson helps to build empathy as - students consider that not everyone feels the same way; sometimes different situations can lead people to feel and/or react differently even when in the same situation. The teacher could extend this work to consider moments where a similar situation may have happened, but a person may have felt a different way.
 - Accountable Talk & Discussion Prompts:
 - Have you ever been in a situation where you felt different than your friend?
- Readers recognize that secondary characters can help a main character to solve a problem or overcome an emotion/feeling.
 - Prompts:
 - What are some ways that characters in the text (Benji and mom) helped the main character (Sammy)?
 - What are some ways that we can help someone feel better when they are upset?
- Readers don't just make predictions—they read with their prediction in mind. (IF...THEN...pages 8-9) Predicting

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Readers can hold onto information from series books as they read the next book. (IF...THEN...page 10) • Readers pay extra-special close attention to the first chapter of a new book. (IF...THEN...page 10) • Readers reread the first chapter: for fluency! (IF...THEN...page 10) • Readers work hard to hold onto what's happening in the story. (IF...THEN...page 10) • Readers need to notice not just what that character says, but how the characters says it, and how they react to what's happening in the story. (IF...THEN...pages 10-11) • Readers get to know the personality of a character, just like they get to know the personalities of people in life. (IF...THEN...pages 11-12) • Readers that think about the story and the character often form questions. (IF...THEN...page 12) • Readers think deeply about the end of the book. (IF...THEN...page 12) • Readers usually plan what want they want to say to their reading partners about the book. (IF...THEN...page 12) • (Retelling) • Readers don't just think about each chapter in the book separately— instead, readers work hard to put the whole book together. (IF...THEN...pages 12-13)
BEND II: GETTING TO KNOW CHARACTERS - EVEN WHEN IT'S HARD Goal: Readers get to know characters—even when it's hard!	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Readers pay extra-special attention to any pictures in the book, and reread often to help make a picture in their mind (Envisioning). (IF...THEN...pages 13-14) • Readers notice when a character does something that seems out of character because a careful reader will stop to figure out what's going on. (IF...THEN...page 14) • Readers will notice that there is more than one way of thinking about a character. (IF...THEN...page 14) • Readers use everything they know to solve for new words when they run into tricky parts in the book. (IF...THEN...page 15) • Readers repeat a brand-new vocabulary word, so that if they come across it again, they might recognize it. (IF...THEN...page 15) • Readers look for blends and digraphs at the beginning of a word and say the sounds. (IF...THEN...page 15)

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Readers break off familiar endings (for example -ing, -ly, -ed, -er) and deal with what's left over. Shared Reading:

Throughout the unit, outside of reader's workshop, readers should have the opportunities to revisit texts as a class from different lenses. Teachers may want to choose texts just above the benchmark text level for this time of year.

For this unit, choose excerpts from your read-aloud and enlarge them and use those texts to work on fluency, word solving, and vocabulary.

Unit 2b- Writing

Writing Gripping Fictional Stories (Grade 2 - If...Then...Curriculum: Assessment-Based Instruction)

Summary and Rationale

After writing small moments, students will be able to easily transition into the work of this unit as they build to writing larger fictional stories. This unit prioritizes story structure, spotlighting the plotting work that a short story writer does, emphasizing especially that a good story contains a scene (a small moment) or two and is told to build gripping tension. In the first bend, “Think of a Character and of Small Moments Stories for That Character: Generating and Writing Several Short Fiction Books”, students will write several focused short stories, writing in booklets. Then, in the second bend. “Revise with Intention: Pull Readers to the Edges of Their Seats”, children will return to the stories they have written, revising these stories for greater meaning and tension. They may revise by writing whole new versions of their stories, reaching toward the goal of storytelling rather than summarizing. In Bend III, “Repeat the Process and Accumulate Lessons Along the Way”, children will repeat the process, this time focusing on doing all that they can do to make their stories even better. Children will self-assess at the start of, and throughout this bend, setting goals for themselves based on the narrative checklist, on charts they see around the room, and on what they see in their writing.

IMPORTANT TIPS FOR IMMERSION:

During the first week, teachers should plan time for sharing mentor texts so that students can all explore common texts together. Interactive and shared writing are also important ways for students to see the process of writing realistic fiction stories* The goal of this unit is to teach students to focus on two or three realistic characters, generate small moment stories in which a character/s encounters trouble and somehow resolves it.

Note: In shared writing, the teacher acts as a scribe with student participation and collaboration. In interactive writing, the teacher and student share the pen and write the parts of the text together.

Unit 3a- Reading
Becoming Experts: Reading Nonfiction (Grade 2 - Unit 2)
Summary and Rationale

This unit progresses through three parts. The first bend sets the readers up for noticing, learning from, and questioning texts. To launch the unit, you'll gather items - whatever you can get your hands on - for students to study closely, notice details in, and learn from as they grow knowledge. Much of the work in this bend will teach students to read nonfiction texts intent on learning about a topic. The second bend focuses on the hard and flexible work readers need to do as they solve tricky words, concepts, and domain-specific vocabulary inside their nonfiction reading books. The final bend sets students up to topic shop-to think about a topic and to preview a topic by thinking how the books will teach what information is likely to be inside each text.

Session 1

BEFORE YOU READ

- Introduce the new read-aloud to students. Build excitement and activate prior knowledge.
- Take a sneak peek. Think aloud as you preview the front and back covers, using the details from the pictures to anticipate main topics the book might teach.
- Pages 1-3. Model how you preview a few pages in the text, lingering on illustrations to predict what the book will teach.
- Pages 6-7. Invite students to join you in previewing the text, studying illustrations closely in partnership.

AS YOU READ

- Pages 1-3: Read aloud the text with expression. Invite students to think about the text to understand its meaning.
- Pages 6-7: Read the next few pages. Listen in to assess how well students are able to retell information they have just read. Then, model a proficient retell of the text.
- Channel readers to notice how pages go together, putting key details together to determine the main topic of a section.
- Read on to decide if the next pages go along with the main topic or if they teach about a different main topic.
- Pages 8-9: Pause to gauge students' understanding of the main topics.
- Pages 10-13: Orchestrate the entire process of restating the key details to determine the main topic.

AFTER YOU READ

- Review what students have learned so far and ask them to retell the text by naming the main topic and telling key details that go with each part.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Listen to students' key details work, and coach to make sure they are filling the details under the right part and retelling the entire text. ● Coach students to act out a page, drawing on information in the illustrations and text to enhance their acting. ● Support students in growing ideas from the text. Channel students to predict what they expect upcoming parts of the book will teach.
Session 2	BEFORE YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Set readers up to prepare for the second half of the book by recalling what they have learned so far and previewing upcoming sections. AS YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Prompt students to listen actively, urging them to signal when new main topics are uncovered. ● Pages 14-17: read aloud a few pages. Set students up to listen and decide how information is changing across the text. ● Pages 18-21. Ask students to raise questions about what they are learning. ● Pages 22-25: Pause to figure out unfamiliar vocabulary as you read aloud, and channel students to construct definitions using a repertoire of strategies. ● Page 28. Pause before reading the page to notice changes in text features and set children up to shift their thinking. Support students in checking their prediction as they read on. ● Pages 29-30. Coach students to think of a heading for the final section of the book. ● Guide students to check their prediction against the actual heading and consider why the author chose a particular heading for that section. AFTER YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Set students up for a whole-class conversation. Give partnerships a few

	minutes to talk together to prepare before discussing with the class. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Remind students of expectations for growing ideas during whole-class conversations. Draw their attention to charts and earlier experiences. ● Engage the class in conversation, recalling and thinking about parts of and responses to the text. Coach students to grow text-based ideas and ensure that all students participate. ● Assess students' abilities to determine author's purpose through an individual stop-and-jot. ● Set a purpose for reading the text, and ask students to consider parts that helped them understand the author's purpose.
Session 3	BEFORE YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Review students' ideas about the author's purpose. AS YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Recruit students to think more deeply about the text as you reread sections of it. Alternate between reading, partner talk, and sharing students' ideas with the class. AFTER YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Invite students to engage in conversations centered around the author's purpose.
Shared Reading: Throughout the unit, outside of reader's workshop, readers should have the opportunities to revisit texts as a class from different lenses. Teachers may want to choose texts just above the benchmark text level for this time of year. In this unit, Tigers and the song, "I Just Can't Wait to Be King" are selected text. The same text will be shared across multiple days, each day with a different focus. Below are suggested lenses, in this unit, for each day's shared reading time: DAY ONE: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Getting to know the shared reading book. ● Taking a sneak peek to anticipate information. ● Applying word-solving skills. DAY TWO:

- Orchestrating information by asking, “Does it make sense, sound right, and look right?” to check words (cross-checking)
- Rereading for comprehension.
- Developing more fluency.

DAY THREE:

- Exploring word study patterns and concepts.
- Studying vocabulary and word choice to deepen comprehension.

DAY FOUR:

- Reading with fluency (appropriate pacing, parsing, and prosody).
- Reading for meaning.

DAY FIVE:

- Reading to orchestrate and use everything students have learned this week.

Unit 3b - Writing
The How-To Guide for Nonfiction Writing (additional spiral book)
Summary and Rationale
This unit progresses into 3 Bends. In Bend I, “Writing Lots of Nonfiction Books Quickly”, students will begin to write nonfiction books with vigor right out of the gate by learning from the experts, writing a lot of information, setting goals, and making plans. Bend II, “Writing for an Audience”, allows writers to consider what information their audience wants to know, writers to hook an audience’s interest, answering readers’ questions, setting goals, editing, and writing their final drafts. In Bend III, “Writing Nonfiction Books of All Kinds”, students will learn with authors as mentors, use reminders to craft new books, offer feedback from one writer to another, and plan for the final celebration.

Objectives (SLO)

IMPORTANT TIPS FOR IMMERSION:

During the first week, teachers should plan time for sharing mentor texts so that students can all explore common texts together. Interactive and shared writing are also important ways for students to see the process of writing nonfiction texts.* The most challenging part of this unit will be teaching students how to write for an audience. Emphasize demonstrating how to angle their writing toward a person or persons which will ultimately read their book.

Note: In shared writing, the teacher acts as a scribe with student participation and collaboration. In interactive writing, the teacher and student share the pen and write the parts of the text together.

During your interactive and shared writing make sure to model the following steps:

1. How to introduce the topic you will teach about.
2. How to include lots of information.
3. How to organize your writing.
4. How to use transition words.
5. How to write an ending.

Unit 4a - Reading
Series Book Clubs (Grade 2 - Unit 4)
Summary and Rationale
In this unit, your second graders will welcome the opportunity to read a lot about a favorite character in series books clubs. To begin, you will form partnerships where a pair of students have the same title to read and discuss. There should be at least two pairs of students reading books in the same series so that these four learners can form a book club later on in the unit where they will read and discuss books in the same series. In bend one, these two pairs will each read a different book in a series and then partners will swap books. Then after partners have read some parts aloud and discussed understandings, they will come together in a book club to talk across the series, comparing similarities and differences. Using a familiar series throughout this unit, provides a safe, supportive context for not only daring thinking, but also for breakthrough work with skills. As a series becomes more familiar to your children, their thinking will become bolder and more insightful. Further, across this unit, your students will become far more adept at the foundational skills upon which all fiction readers rely: previewing, envisionment, prediction, monitoring for sense, inferring, and understanding characters and other story elements.
Recommended Pacing
March to April (6-8 weeks)
Standards
Reading: Literature
RL.2.1	Ask and answer such questions as who , what , where , when , why , and how to demonstrate understanding of key details in a text.

Interactive Read Aloud: The Stories Julian Tells

Sessions 1 and 2

BEFORE YOU READ

- Model how you take a sneak peek—previewing a text by reading the title, studying the cover, and reading the back blurb.
- Unpack figurative language from the title of the first chapter to predict what it could be about.
- Prepare readers to collect as much information as possible about the characters in the story.

AS YOU READ

- Page 2: Pause and prompt students to use details from the text to describe Julian’s father. Then, model creating a mentor Post-it about Julian’s father.
- Page 5: Pause and prompt students to continue gathering information about the characters in the text.
- Page 6: Pause and prompt students to predict what will happen next.
- Page 6: Pause and prompt students to confirm and/or revise their predictions. Then, ask students to add more to their jots about the characters.
- Page 12: Pause and prompt students to describe the characters’ feelings, citing examples from the text. Then, ask the students to predict how the story will end.
- Page 16: Stop at the end of the chapter for students to confirm and revise their predictions and to discuss how the problem was solved.

AFTER YOU READ

- Review whole-class discussion routines and prompt children to make their book talk stronger.

Sessions 3 and 4

BEFORE YOU READ

- Prompt students to review their notes about characters and discuss what they have learned so far.
- Coach students to use the chapter title and study the illustrations to predict what the chapter will be about.

AS YOU READ

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Page 19: Coach and prompt students to revise and/or confirm predictions. Then, coach students to connect information about characters across chapters. ● Page 23: After reading the first sentence, prompt and coach students to think inferentially about the characters' actions. ● Page 24: Coach and prompt students to use prior knowledge about the characters to predict how they might handle the problem. ● Page 28: Prompt students to revise and/or confirm predictions. Then, ask the students to infer why they think the characters acted in a certain way. ● Page 30: Ask students to summarize the key events of the story to partners. AFTER YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Encourage students to compare and contrast the characters' actions and behaviors across both chapters.
Session 5	BEFORE YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Prompt students to recap what they learned about the characters in the first two chapters. Then, show students how to use the chapter title to predict what the next chapter will be about. AS YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Page 34: Pause and prompt students to continue to examine characters to infer and grow a deeper understanding about them. ● Page 36: Reread and examine parts of the text to examine how the character has changed. AFTER YOU READ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Encourage students to generate topics for the whole-class conversation.
Shared Reading: Throughout the unit, outside of reader's workshop, readers should have the opportunities to revisit texts as a class from different lenses. Teachers may want to choose texts just above the benchmark text level for this time of year. In this unit, The Stories Julian Tells and the song, "Magic Penny" are selected text. The same text will be shared across multiple days, each day with a different focus.

Below are suggested lenses, in this unit, for each day's shared reading time:

DAY ONE:

- Reading for comprehension-clarifying unknown vocabulary and phrases.
- Using sources of information (MSV) to figure out tricky words.

DAY TWO:

- Cross-checking sources of information (MSV).
- Reading for comprehension.
- Rereading to better understand characters.

DAY THREE:

- Reading for comprehension.
- Studying vocabulary and words with multiple meanings.

DAY FOUR:

- Reading with fluency (appropriate pacing, parsing, and prosody).

DAY FIVE:

- Reading for deeper comprehension.
- Studying craft.

Unit 4b - Writing
Writing About Reading: Opinion Writing (Grade 2 - Book 3)
Summary and Rationale
This unit contains 3 bends and serves as the Opinion Writing unit for 2nd grade. In Bend I, a “Letter Writing: A Glorious Tradition”, students will learn how to write letters to share ideas about characters, generate more letters by developing new opinions, keeping their audience in mind, and using a checklist to set goals. In Bend II, “Raising the Level of Our Level Writing”, students will begin to write about more than one part of a book, read closely to generate more writing, gathering evidence to support each of our opinions, using capitals, and publishing our opinions for all to read. Bend III, “ Writing Nominations and Awarding Favorite Books”, allows students to select nominees, support their opinions with quotes, write introductions and conclusions that captivate, use a checklist to set goals, and keep elaboration going

Objectives (SLO)

IMPORTANT TIPS FOR IMMERSION:

During the first week, teachers should plan time for sharing mentor texts so that students can all explore common texts together. Interactive and shared writing are also important ways for students to see the process of writing opinion texts.* During immersion week, it is important to model how to formulate opinions about a character in the form of a letter. Focus on demonstrating how to structure the letter, how to formulate an opinion, and how to support an opinion with reasons and details from a text.

In your writing be sure to model how to:

1. Set up your letter
2. Name your opinion about a common character
3. Give reasons and evidence to explain why you have that opinion.
4. Conclude your letter

Note: In shared writing, the teacher acts as a scribe with student participation and collaboration. In interactive writing, the teacher and student share the pen and write the parts of the text together.

Unit 5a - Reading
Bigger Books Mean Amping Up Reading Power (Grade 2 - Unit 3)
Summary and Rationale
Launching into a new unit often begins with new resolve and reflection. Since the beginning of second grade, you have watched your readers grow bigger and stronger. Now, they are ready to be challenged in new ways, tackling longer and harder books. Above all, at the start of this unit you will convey that your students are ready for new challenges, and that each child is responsible for deciding what specifically he or she needs to work on to grow as a reader. This unit focuses on these aspects of reading: fluency, literary language, and tracking longer stories. You are encouraged to bring your own energy and resolve to this unit on building foundational skills so that the work feels interesting, fresh, and challenging-yet within your readers' grasp.

AFTER YOU READ

- Initiate a whole-class discussion about the message of the story.
- Ask students to first turn and talk to their partners to discuss their ideas.
- Initiate a whole-class conversation, reminding students of the rules and routines of accountable talk.
- Summarize, provide closure to the conversation, and offer feedback.

Shared Reading: Throughout the unit, outside of reader’s workshop, readers should have the opportunities to revisit texts as a class from different lenses. Teachers may want to choose texts just above the benchmark text level for this time of year.

In this unit, Happy Like Soccer and the song, “You Are My Sunshine” are selected texts. The same text will be shared across multiple days, each day with a different focus.

Below are suggested lenses, in this unit, for each day’s shared reading time:

DAY ONE:

- Warm up
- Book introduction
- Word solving

DAY TWO:

- Practice trying the long and then the short sound to solve a word.
- Use syllables to solve words.
- Use prefixes and suffixes to solve words.

DAY THREE:

- Use strategies to solve vocabulary words.
- Notice and solve similes.
- Notice and solve imagery.
- Notice and solve metaphors.

DAY FOUR:

- Practice scooping up words into phrases.
- Practice reading at a just-right pace.
- Practice noticing mood to read with expression.

DAY FIVE:

- Put all the skills of the week together.
- Retell the book and all the events in it.

Poetry: Big Thoughts in Small Packages (Grade 2 - Unit 4)
Summary and Rationale
This unit is broken into 3 bends. Bend I, “Seeing with Poets’ Eyes”, will invite the students to see from the author’s perspective, listen for line breaks, read poems aloud, find strong feelings and concrete details of life, and edit poetry. Unit 6b (Optional)
Non Fiction “Expert Topic” Writing: Brochure/ Informational Poster
Summary and Rationale

This unit can be used with some elements from Lab Reports and Science Books. At the beginning, students will share information about a topic they know a lot about. In the middle of the unit, writers will use the features found in non-fiction books in their own writing to teach others about a topic. At the end of the unit, writers will work in partnerships to revise and improve their writing.

Recommended Pacing

At the end of the year, if time allows.
